Electronic Gadgets

Electronic gadgets such as, laptops, games, mp3 or mobile phones can affect many things to children. The benefits of having electronic gadgets for children are, it could help them study by going through the Internet or using other applications. For example, having a laptop can help students a lot for school works because mostly, school works needed to be emailed or printed. Having an MP3 player can also help kids/students to help with boring things or if they have nothing to do. Sometimes, PSP, DS or any game device can also support students to learn more because of their excitement for playing. There are video games that use skills. It could also help kids to earn more skills. People use these things for the benefits, but not for the negatives. Mobile phones can help us to communicate with other people for necessary things. Phones can help us to contact our parents, if we need to or there are no near telephones. Having electronic gadgets can help kids, but sometimes kids used it too much often and used it for something that is not related for studying. There are students who used their electronic devices in school but not school related. For example, here in SPH, there are some students who are still playing video games on their laptop when the teachers are not around. This action can distract the students of having concentration and can make their scores and results to be poor. The result of this can also cause the student in failing class. They could also follow what the game or game characters do, for example in fighting games, students can be lead to bad behaviors such as, cursing or physical abuse to other friends. If students spent too much time in playing games, PSP, DS and such, they will not be concentrated in studying and all they think about at school is just playing the game. This can also give them bad grades and bad behaviors. Games addiction can cause children to distract everything else, some kids may not want to eat, study or play outside. Playing games and electronic devices too much is not good because we also need to be in the outdoor. Being always in a room is bad because there's no fresh air and it can affect our health. Always seeing screens in gadgets such as, laptops and games can affect our eyes. Our eyes also need a break from seeing too much LCD screen. MP3 can also distract the concentration of students while doing their school works. Mobile phones can distract kids too. These days, we could see 9 year olds having phones.

They don't actually need it because they're age are not appropriate to have phones. Teens also have problems with phones because it can distract them on doing their school work because its much more interesting. Sometimes they need it for their social life, but they can do it during school. Phones these days are more modern and some of them can also have applications and games. Sometimes the applications they are using are good but they could also have games and too much games is not good. Maybe they also need entertainment, they can have entertainment, but not too much. Having a computer, laptop or any device that have Internet is sometimes dangerous because there are sites that children are not suppose to go. There are some sites that allows people to talk to strangers, and that is not good for kids because they can give their complete information to the stranger. This stranger can be a dangerous person and can kidnap kids through the Internet. There are also inappropriate sites for children and they could be used to going to that sites or looking to inappropriate things. Sometimes we need electronic gadgets but sometimes they could be bad and dangerous for us too.
